

For obliquities >54 degrees, mean annual temperatures in the tropics are lower than at the poles, but low-latitude glaciation is unlikely because of very high seasonality.